Technology has changed the way we operate through the years. While we formerly used to publish and print mid-term reports, we now count on real time updates in Harmony for parents and students to reference. Some may believe mid-term reporting is obsolete because Harmony can be used to look at a student’s grades at any time. We still advertise a mid-term reporting day for two reasons. Firstly, students may have turned in late assignments, and teachers have not had time to get them fully graded and into their gradebook. Secondly, teachers take assessing their students seriously, and it can take a few days to get items graded and in their grade books. Today, Friday the 13th, all middle school teachers will have their gradebooks up to date. No additional items will be added to the gradebooks until Monday the 16th (at the earliest). Of course, grades can and likely will change very quickly with additional assignments, quizzes, and tests that will be added to the gradebook as early as Monday. We encourage parents to contact teachers with any concerns about your child’s performance in class.

Should you contact a teacher via email and not receive a reply, please give us a call. From time to time, outside emails get delivered to SPAM mailboxes, and the recipient is unaware of the email. We can remedy such a situation if we are made aware. All teachers and I value the partnership we share with parents in providing a quality education to your child. Thank you for all you do to help us!
